Gaining Key Input, Making Plans for Fall

Our priority for the start of the 2020-21 school year is returning Mooresville students to high-quality learning in a safe environment, with options to fit our families' needs. We've been pulling together ideas and information from people throughout our school community, from every school building, and through every department.

Superintendent Randy Taylor

To gain as much information and insight as possible on our re-opening, I have met with all school administrators, the Mooresville Classroom Teachers Association Executive Board, the Morgan County Health Department, Morgan County school superintendents, state-wide and local legal counsel, Mooresville Schools Health Services, the Indiana School Board Association, Central Indiana Educational Services Center, and local businesses.

Assistant Superintendent Dr. Jake Allen is overseeing operations and funding initiatives, including functions for food services, maintenance, transportation, and human resources.

Planning for 2020-21

Assistant Superintendent Holly Frye is overseeing instruction, including both in-seat and remote learning options for general education and special education services. This includes researching online teaching and learning options which will be more robust than the previous eLearning model.

Principals from every school building created a team including parents, teaching staff, support staff, special education staff, and health services to discuss their building-specific ideas and concerns. Their input will be vital in our overall plan.

Department leaders for technology, transportation, food services, facilities and maintenance, health services, safety, and communications have been tasked with researching best practices for their areas to support overall school operations.

Our school board will be reviewing input from all of these areas and audiences to create the strongest possible plan for returning to school for Mooreville students. We hope to have this information to our families as soon as possible, but will not rush this important process.

Our Pioneer Pathways to Reopening includes input from audiences across our school community and all school buildings, as well as input in several key areas.

As we continue to plan our Pioneer Pathways to Reopening, we'll keep our community informed with as much information as we can. Thank you for your continued support of our students and our schools.
